Learn the principles of good residential design and start making smarter, more sustainable choices about your home. We think that design education, like learning how to cook, is something that's best accomplished through hands-on practice. That's why we've adapted the cooking school model of education to create a unique design teaching studio that combines the latest digital technologies with good old hand-drawn design activities. Join us for a Saturday morning of residential design. No experience is necessary, just a desire to learn about good design. We'll take care of the rest.
